Preface

N this record we are able to give positive data only after the settlement in Butler County, Pa., of John Campbell and his wife Ann Christy, although it is known that during the earlier part of the eighteenth century the Campbells came from Argyle-shire, Scotland, settling in the eastern part of Pennsylvania, familiarly called "East of the Mountains." Later they moved to Polk Run, Westmoreland County, Pa., and still later a number of brothers moved on further west, settling one in each of several counties

John Campbell and his wife, Ann Christy, being the first generation in this record, settled in Butler County when western Pennsylvania was still a wilderness. During the earlier years of their residence here, the women and children frequently fled to the block house at Freeport from the Indians, while the men were engaged in driving off the natives. After a few years some of the older members of the family returned to Westmoreland County to settle up an estate or dispose of property left. On the way they endured many hardships such as walking many miles, swimming rivers, etc.

John Campbell and his sons homesteaded, settled or acquired by purchase large tracts of land in Concord, Fairview and Parker Townships, the division being made among them by casting lots, the tract in Concord Township falling to Robert. John and his wife lived with Robert until John died, being buried in a field on Robert's farm, where his remains rested until about the year 1908 when they were taken from the field and laid in Concord cemetery. His casket had been hewn from the native tree and put together with wooden pins. The casket had been finished by applying a stain made from boiling cherry bark. After John's death, Ann lived with her son Thomas in Parker Township, and was buried in the old Bear Creek cemetery.

The earlier Campbells were affiliated with the Scotch Presbyterian or United Presbyterian churches, though later generations became members of almost every branch of the Christian church. Andrew Campbell, the third son of John Campbell, Sr., donated the land for the present site of Bear Creek cemetery and the old U. P. church, the last resting place of the bodies of Andrew and his wife being in the identical spot upon which the Log church stood.

The first Campbell and Gibson reunion was held August 20, 1891 on the Levi Campbell farm in Parker Township, the location of the first Campbell settlement. The next reunion was held August 27, 1907, at Concord Church where the reunion has been held annually ever since.

This record is as nearly complete as it was possible to make it. At times the difficulty in securing data was very great on account of inability to find the addresses of some of those who had removed to other states or localities, and also to secure replies to letters in cases where information was sought. We are very grateful to those who were so faithful in giving much needed aid and assistance in the completion of this record, or assisted in any way in compiling it.
